Amy June Humble, a resident of Sunderland, has submitted the following question to be put to the Council meeting on 29 January 2020.

“It was recently reported that Sunderland has 737 empty business premises in the city, meaning that council misses out on thousands of lost business rates each year. I believe the council has a director of city development, earning a huge £170k a year. Does the council leader think this huge salary is value for money?”

Laura Murrell, a resident of Sunderland, has submitted the following question to be put to the Council meeting on 29 January 2020.

“There have been recent reports in the Guardian (19th January) and the Sunderland Echo (22nd January) concerning bed shortages at Sunderland Royal Hospital which have resulted in patients being left to sleep in the Accident and Emergency department overnight. Since the merger of Sunderland and South Tyneside hospital trusts in in April 2019, there has been a consistent increase in the number of patients having to wait more than 4 hours for a bed with almost 700 waiting in October 2019. Yet South Tyneside and Sunderland Foundation Trust assured the public that cuts imposed under Phase 1 of the Path to Excellence programme and the Urgent Care Review would not downgrade services but would improve them and they are now about to embark on Phase 2 of the Path to Excellence which contains proposals for a further net loss of about 60 beds.

This situation cannot be acceptable for the people of Sunderland. What is the Council doing to safeguard Sunderland residents?”
